By Lauren Schwartzberg, Alexandra Ilyashov, and Karen Iorio Adelson

While the right mattress might make for a painless night's sleep, and the best sheets will keep you comfortable, a duvet cover is the item tasked with both keeping you cozy and decorating your bed. For our update on the best ones to buy, we talked to some of the interior designers we previously invited to weigh in on the best sheets, best summer sheets, best pillows for side sleepers, and other sleep-related bests, plus a few new ones. These are the people who've touched and tested more duvets than we ever could. Let the experts help you decide.

Sferra Sereno Full/Queen Duvet Cover

Also featuring a muted, stitched design, this very fancy duvet cover is one designers reach for when creating a traditional bedding look. "A go-to for us is the Sereno duvet cover from Sferra. [It's] classically simple and luxurious and we love the subtle detail of the wide hemstitch," says interior designer Jess Blumberg, of Dale Blumberg Interiors. "We love the simplicity and sophistication in the design and the soft hand of the linens."

Ettitude Bamboo Lyocell Duvet Cover

Blumberg likes these silky-smooth bamboo duvet covers that come in shades like mint and sky blue. "They're modern, minimal, and supersoft," she says, "and it doesn't hurt that they're sustainable, hypoallergenic, and affordable."
